THRACE-LINQ HIRES QUALITY ASSURANCE MANAGER

Technical fabrics supplier expands to meet growing demands for new solutions

SUMMERVILLE, SC —October 26, 2011— Thrace-LINQ boosts its Quality Assurance (QA) Lab and appoints Gregory W. Adams to lead as QA Manager. “With innovation, leading edge performance and competitive pricing the cornerstone of our product philosophy, Thrace-LINQ is fully committed to establishing best-practice procedures that guarantee Quality Assurance throughout its growing technical fabric product range and corporate culture,” says Davis Taylor, the Company’s Vice President of Operations.

Gregg brings a rich educational background in quality control, testing methods, product development and engineering. He is a champion with over 21 years of technical experience in data collection/validation/management and research and development. He received a Bachelor of Science from College of Charleston.

“Thrace-LINQ’s goal is nothing less than Quality Excellence,” Gregg says. “The pursuit of Quality Excellence is unending. Our aim is to ensure that Thrace-LINQ products achieve the highest standards in terms of manufacturing quality and that all customers receive premier service and support. In order to satisfy our customers with the price and performance they expect, my job is to keep costs down through lean production and just-in-time manufacturing while ensuring superb Thrace-LINQ performance with robust quality control and continuous improvement.”

Gregg will champion our seasoned family of knowledgeable technicians committed to achieving industry standards of excellence and will play a major role in partnering with business development and production managers to identify customer needs, market trends and new product opportunities across the growing nonwovens industry.
